We have found that www.balfour.com does homeschool rings - you do need to visit their store instead of trying to order online. To look online you do have to choose a local school, but then you can go on to look. One is really nice called the "Grace". They will also allow you to make payments.

We did find out the Wal-Mart will do class rings, however they do not like to have "specialty" names. It costs an extra $50.00 for a die cast to have it done. You also have to ask for it because they really don't have much knowledge on working with homeschoolers.

A true homeschool web site is www.joyjewelers.com - they have a homeschool section! They also offer the option for custom wording around the stone - with a $99.00 additional fee.

One that I found that was really nice because it offers so much more than just High School rings is Dunham Manufacturing at <http://www.dunham-mfg.com/> - my Middle School son is wanting one for 8th grade graduation. They even have kindergarten - too cute!

Another one that is nice is www.beclassrings.com. They offer a wide variety of rings that you can customize.

Artcarved offers you the option to fully build you ring at www.artcarved.com - but then you have to print out the form and take it to a local dealer.

Another one is Lord's Fine Jewelry at www.lordsfinejewelry.com. You can't order off the web site - you have to call their 800 number to place an order. From the online catalog, it seems they have some really nice rings.

I am sure Josten's could do a specialty ring, but I couldn't find any pricing or ordering information to do so. You would probably have to find a local store or call for information.

Some of the web sites I found ended up being Artcarved dealers, so it would be more beneficial to visit a local store than to order online through a dealer.
